Hon. W. Claude Jones asked time to make a few remarks. The law relating to election was clear and specific, and by it the first step towards contesting an election was a petition signed by fifty or more voters of the district from which the member was returned. He had thought that the Nobles would not interfere with the rights of the people, and was surprised that the objection to the sitting of a Representative should come from them. During the Convention of 1864, the seat of the member from North Kona was contested, and the same question came up on the interpretation of the law, and I find my position sustained by the highest authority in the Kingdom. His Majesty and the Attorney General, then declared that the members had no right to do away with the choice of the people. He had some experience in parliamentary usage, and had never seen a precedent for this action of the Nobles. Should this resolution prevail it will open the door to trouble and confusion. He had left a foreign land more than three years ago for the purpose of coming to these shores, and had expressed his intention to do so at the time, and had carried out his intention by coming here, and residing here ever since his arrival, and would now offer

a motion to indefinitely postpone the resolution. Hon, C. R. Bishop said in offering the resolution I deemed it a duty to the public. I had no personal reasons. I have high authority for the course that I have taken-the Constitution-which says that to be a Representative a person must have been demiciled three years the last of which must be the one preceding the election. There can be no question as to my right to object. We have all sworn to support the Constitution and laws of the Kingdom. It is true no petition has been presented from the people; but they | merce. may have been deterred by various reasons. There are many ways to prevent a petition from coming before us. I have no reason to suppose any wrong act at that place. Referred to Committee on Internal Imin regard to the election or a petition. must come up sooner or later. Hon. Mr. Lyons said that the question was not on the constitutional eligibility of the member from his intention to introduce the following bills : South Kona. But on the legal method of bringing An Act to facilitate the settlement of boundaries by the matter before the House. Every statute has an the appointment of a sole Commission, and extend the accompanying provision in the law specifying the term of the Commission of Boundaries established by method of calling that statute into effect. Such is an Act approved 23d August, 1862. the law specifying the mode of contesting elections, which must be by petition from the people. The second estate as members of this Assembly can indeed claim to inquire into the right of those who profess to represent the third estate, but the inquiring must be by lawful modes. They had had in this case ample time and opportunity, for seventy days had clapsed since the election, there was a strong opposition at the time in the district itself, and it had been well known for a long time that the member elected had not resided in the Kingdom for the space of time required by the law. As the legal and practicable

Noble says he was not actuated by personal suspended and the Standing Committees be apmotives; if so, after what I have said, has any one doubts as to my right? I hope my motion will prevail, and thus save time to the Assembly. In the Convention, a Committee, of which Hon. P. Hon. S. H. Phillips said, before members are called upon to vote, they should know what they vote on. He had reasons for thinking that the member for South Kona had no right to a seat, and in order to get at the truth in the matter, he wished to refer it to a committee for inquiry. What reasonable objection can be offered against such a course? If the Hon. H. R. Hitchcock moved that the Standing Hon. gentleman feels that he has a right to his seat, of Kau be exempt from all taxes (except road) this Committees, as appointed, be printed and why object to having his rights investigated by a year, owing to the sudden calamity that has befallen Committee? No one law can set aside the Constitution. The Constitution defines in clear terms the power of the Assembly. Suppose, for instance, that the member should bribe the whole district, and fifty honest men could not be found to sign a petition; or, suppose war exists, and the enemy land in the district, and by force carry an election and send a foreigner to represent the district; shall it be said that this Assembly cannot investigate his right to sit be- fered. cause fifty men do not offer a petition against it? As the member of South Kona had spoken several times, the House was probably ready to act upon his motion. his action in the House would not only affect the people of South Kona, but the whole Kingdom, and given the House by the Constitution, the highest law to reconsider the matter was through a petition. He did not claim that there has been any bribery or any misconduct in his election, but the facts bearing upon this were all before the House, as well as the people of South Kona, and were based upon the Constitution. The people of Kona might not have known how long their representative has resided here, but the House did, and the gentleman knew that he had not resided here before January, 1866, and claimed that it was not a surprise to him to have his eligibility doubted by this House. And if a petition had come from the people of South Kona, he would like to know to whom it would be referred? To the same Committee that this resolution had. He did not believe that the Assembly would allow a man to sit if he were erazy, or could not read and write, and did not believe in this case that the Assembly had gone contrary to the Statute. ## NINE DAYS' LATER NEWS. Arrival of the D. C. Murray.

Wednesday, 18 days from San Francisco, with mails and papers to April 4th.

The clipper ship Kingfisher and brig Percy Edwards left San Francisco the same day, bound to this port, but have not yet arrived. The following is a summary of the news received by the bark : Impeachment Trial. Washington, March 30 .- At half-past twelve the

the House Managers entered. Butler commenced his speech at a quarter before one o'clock, and spoke over three hours. He referred to the fact that the trial about to commence was the most important in the history of our country, and one that has, perhaps, no parallel in the tory of any other country. He then proceeded to state the case as it comes before the Senate. The Senate, he said, was different from other Courts. It was a law unto itself, and not subject to the ordinary rules of Courts, being governed only by the | Put. principles of justice and equity. Butler then pro-ceeded to quote the history of other impeachment cases in this country and England, to show the power of the Court in trying the case. He dwelt n this at great length. After having stated the preliminary principles in the case, Butler proceeded review the articles of impeachment, and concluded by saying: The safeguards of this Constitution against usurpation are in your hands; the interests and hopes of free institutions wait upon your decision. The House of Representatives has few members were present, and no business was done its duty. We have presented the facts in a done Constitutional manner. We have brought the criminal to your bar and demand judgment at your hands for his great crimes. Never again, if Andrew Johnson shall go acquitted, free this day, can the people of this or any other country by Constitu-tional checks and guards stay the usurpation of Executive power. I speak, therefore, not the language of exaggeration, but words of truth and soberness, in saying that the future political welfare and the liberties of all men hang trembling on the decision of the Senate. After the conclusion of Butler's speech, Wilson Chanceller and Chief Justice .........$10,006 00 on the part of the Managers, offered in evidence certified copies of the oath of office of President Johnson; of the appointment of Secretary Stanton | to the 9th inst, state that the British captives were by President Lincoln; the ratification of said nomination, and the message of Andrew Johnson to Theodore was strongly posted, having guns and the Senate assigning his reasons for the suspension of Stanton. the Chief Justice had not the power to decide upon the admissibility of evidence. The Chief Justice stated that if his rulings were not satisfactory, he was willing the Senate abould decide upon them. The Chief Justice was them about to put the question to the Senate, when Bing-

Senator Wilson moved that the Senate retire for consultation, which met with general disapproval-Senator Sherman submitted in writing a question asking the Managers for information as to American precedents on the subject.

Boutwell, of the Managers, responded in an argument that the Constitution vested in the Senate exclusive authority over all questions which coald arise in the trial.

Evarts, from counsel for the President, took the opposite view of the matter. Senator Wilson then insisted on his motion to tive. The Court then retired. CHICAGO, April 1 .- A Republican special gives the following report of the proceedings in secret session, when the Senate retired for deliberation.

The discussion as to the power of the Chief Justice took a wide scope, and was participated in by most of the Senators present. Ferry held that the Chief Justice had the same right as the Vice President. He could vote in case of a tie, but not decide a law point. Conkling spoke in opposition to this position, de-nying that the presiding officer had the right either the Chief Justice had not the right to decide law points, which right was vested exclusively in the Senate. This led to an interesting debate, in which a majority of the Senators took part, by which it appeared that a great diversity of opinion prevailed. The Chief Justice made a very good tempered personal explanation of his views in regard to his position when presiding over the Court of Impeach ment. He thought he was entitled to certain pow-sitting as a Court. Williams, Bayard, and some other Senators main-tained that the Chief Justice was entitled to this position by the Constitution in order that the Senate may have the benefit of his suggestions, as the highest law officer of the Government, but admitted that he had no judicial authority, but only advisory powers. Great difference of opinion being devel-oped, Henderson at length moved to lay Sherman's resolution on the table which was done. He than moved an amendment to the rule to the affect that the presiding officer may rule on all preliminary questions, and questions of evidence, unless some member of the Senate shall ask that the question be submitted to the Senate for decision, which shall then be done. Sumper offered an amendment setting forth that the Chief Justice is not a Senator ; not, in fact, a member of the Court, and had not the right to vote on any question The ayes and noes were called on this. Lost - ayes, 22; noes, 26. The question then recurred on the motion of Mr. Henderson, which was carried by der the seventh rule will be reversed.

When the Court returned to the Senate Chamber at half-past six and announced the result of its deliberations, there was a shade of disappointment on the faces of the Radicals at the action which virtually sustained the Chief Justice in his views. The Court immediately adjourned till to-morrow. There is great dissatisfaction among the politicians to-night at the action of the Senate, and they seert that the presiding officer ought to have been stripped of all power-rendering him useless to do harm if he so desired. The supporters of the President express satisfaction at the action of the Senate. Washington, April I .- Mr. Stanbery argued

Mr. Butler replied at length, showing that the President was guilty of conspiracy.
